5) Section 23 (2) (b) of the municipal Regulation empowers Govt to appoint an ex-officio President Generally the Amildars of the Talukas are appointed as Presidents of the minor municipal Councils by a Notification issued separately in the case of each municipality

6) Provision seems to have been made in Sec 25 (2) (b) of the Regn that "during the absence of a President on leave" the Vice-President may "exercise the powers and perform the duties of the President" It is submitted that this section seems to apply only to a President appointed or elected by name and not to an ex-officio President. If the former takes leave, there will be a temporary vacancy in the municipality

Council but there will be none such if the ex officio President goes on leave as the Meriadar, by virtue of his office as Amildar-in charge becomes the ex officio President. If in the former case, the person goes on leave, the office of the President will really be vacant till his return to duty. But it is not so in the latter case as though the person holding the office (whether President) is on leave, the office itself is not vacant since the office it is filled up by Shri [illegible]

8 The Meriadar in this case has not been appointed an Amildar - He simply works as per his duties of his Amildar & the Amildar does not in his capacity as Amildar become ex officio President of the Municipality. He is separately appointed as a Councillor & then President - just as in the case of Meriadar cannot exercise his powers of Magistrate, so he cannot preside at Council meetings unless he is appointed

Sir,

I have the honor to report that whenever the Amildars go on short leave it is usual to put Taluk Shirastedars in charge of the Amildars' duties. It therefore follows that the Taluk Shirastedars by reason of their being placed in charge of the Taluk, should also look after Municipal works as the Amildars are ex officio Presidents of Municipalities. Now that there are non-official Vice Presidents in some places they resent receiving orders from the acting Presidents who may in a few cases, be acting Taluk Shirastedars. It is considered by the former, that the Vice Presidents are competent to look after the Presidents' duties under Section 25 (2) (d) of the Municipal Regulation with a view to remove any misconception
